

Dr. Sandra Martin

» I am a cognitive neuroscientist specializing in the application of advanced statistical and computational techniques to study language and cognition across the adult lifespan. My work integrates neuroimaging, neuromodulation, and behavioral methods, and I thrive in interdisciplinary settings.

I have extensive experience developing and implementing robust analytical workflows in R and Python. I am committed to open and reproducible research practices, and strive to implement these principles in my work by sharing data and code, using open-source software, and publishing results in open-access journals.
